Understanding the fundamentals of watches for valuation

April 28 to May 2, 2012
NAJA Members Only Course
Registration Form

During this course professionals and novices will be introduced to the identification of watch types, key watch characteristics and components, the role of construction and materials in the proper identification of watches; basic understanding of watch conservation, restoration, refinishing, and repairs; and subsequent impact on value.

The course includes an overview of the evolution of watch types and appropriate terminology as well as criteria for making value judgments based on comparative analysis. Participants will learn watch examination techniques, what to photograph on a watch, and research tools and methods. They will also learn how to apply critical appraisal skills such as qualitative ranking, classification, rarity determination, and how to write accurate descriptions.

This is an intense course and will require evening reading and research assignments.

Course Date for NAJA members: April 28-May 2, 2012 (Wednesday is a half day for those wishing to take exam portion), class begins at 9:00am and runs until 5:00pm. Some evening research and work is required as part of this course.

Location: The NAWCC headquarters at 514 Poplar Street, Columbia, PA 17515

Instructor and Course Developer: Joe Cohen (FL) FNAWC*

Registration is limited and will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis. In order to secure your registration in this course, please submit a $200.00 deposit.
